TWO MEN INDICTED FOR 1997 STRANGULATION MURDER IN THE BRONX
Cold Case Solved This Year After DNA Hit

Bronx District Attorney Darcel D. Clark today announced that two men have been indicted in a strangulation that occurred in the Bronx in 1997. The defendants were apprehended after their DNA was matched to the murder scene.

District Attorney Clark said, “The defendants acted together to allegedly kill the 20-year-old victim, and her body was left in a vacant lot. The murder happened 21 years ago, but today’s indictment sends a clear message that we will pursue justice no matter how much time has passed.”

District Attorney Clark said the defendants, Christopher Dickerson, 42, of 45 Berkman Drive, Middletown, N.Y., and Glenn Broadnax, 40, of 100 Martin Luther King Jr. Place, Brooklyn, were arraigned on second-degree Murder before Bronx Supreme Court Justice George Villegas. Remand was continued for both defendants and they are due back in court on January 11, 2019.

According to the investigation, on March 17, 1997, the defendants allegedly caused the death of Warren White, who identified as a woman named Amanda. The defendants allegedly strangled White with an electrical cord. Her body was found in a lot at 1670 Boston Road, wrapped in a blanket and with the cord still around the neck.

The case is being prosecuted by John Miras, Counsel in the Homicide Bureau, under the supervision of Christine Scaccia, Chief of Homicide Bureau, and the overall supervision of James Brennan, Deputy Chief of the Trial Division, and Theresa Gottlieb, Chief of the Trial Division.
